Mr. Pennell was down to speak on "Art Editing, As I Have Experienced It." He told how he received his first experiences twenty-five years ago on "Scribner's," with such artists as Howard Pyle and Robert Blum-men, who, he said, made illustration a great and living art. Then there was no play-time art or any other except art. Unless we take it like that our art will sink lower, if it is possible to get any lower, he said.

"In view of the urgent necessity of relieving overcrowding it is absurd to think that patients are ever improperly detained in hospitals as is sometimes charged by the uninformed ad ignorant." Dr. Haviland said. "The present liberal parole policy shows that the hospitals are making every effort to restore patients to society as soon as it is consistent with the welfare of both patient and society. The fact is there is far more danger that a mental patient may fail to receive indicated hospital treatment than there is of improper detention.

Patrolman Poet Dies

E. J. Ferguson Was Known as Bard of Police Force

Patrolman John E. J. Ferguson, the poet of the Police Department, died yesterday at St. Francis Hospital of gangrene poisoning. He lived at 152 East 116th Street, and was born August 5, 1873. He joined the department on August 7, 1902. He served several years on patrol duty and for the last two years until a short time ago with the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering. Shortly before his illness he was assigned to the Property Clerk's office.

He was known to virtually every member of the force as "The Poet." At the police dinners one of his poems always was featured. One of Ferguson's poems, "The Rockie," is said to have been memorized by half the policemen of the city.
